
This is an important path of research when one considers that natural climate is continually corrected by periodic forcing such as the daily signal, seasonal/annual signal, and the more complex tidal forcing. So that even with a weakly non-linear formulation, the response may not easily be decomposed but it also may not be chaotic. Thus, there may be hope in deconstructing seemingly erratic time-series such as ENSO.